Memorial Sloan Kettering (MSK)’s regional network facility in Basking Ridge, NJ is offering a special six-week summer internship program designed to encourage undergraduates to consider careers as oncology (cancer) physicians. The students experience includes clinical observation, participation in multidisciplinary conferences, and 1-on-1 teaching with MSK physicians. In addition to having a focused introduction to the clinical management of breast cancer (including breast imaging, medical oncology, and radiation oncology), students will shadow physicians caring for individuals with a variety of different cancers. By the end of the program, the student will have a better understanding of different types and presentations of breast and other cancers, and have gained insight into basic principles of cancer screening, diagnosis, and treatment.
